ENJOY MACOMB'S PEREGRINE FALCONS ON COUNTY WEBSITE

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. – The newest addition to Macomb County government, a family of Peregrine falcons, can now be enjoyed online at the county's Web site.

Anyone can share the experience of seeing the rare birds that took up residence this year at the Macomb County Building in Mount Clemens by viewing the pictures and reading the information available on the website. Photos include the operation by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to place an identification band on the newborn Peregrine chick, named "Alexa" after the county's namesake, Gen. Alexander Macomb.

Peregrine falcons are on Michigan's endangered species list and are on the federal protected list. The county's Web site has links to more information about the falcons and the DNR.

Updates and new features are planned.

To see the Peregrine Falcons online, visit www.macombcountymi.gov and click on the Peregrine falcons link.
